

Hello, Ankylosaurus!

Want to color Ankylosaurus, or roll a dough loop for it?

A Ankylosaurus

Say it: ANG-kih-loh-SORE-us · Ate: plants

Lived: Late Cretaceous · Wow: Ankylosaurus had bony armor and a tail club.

Alex decides: Which spoken word starts with /a/: apple or sun?

If they want more: If that sound game is easy, try a fresh spoken pair: leaf or ankle.

Match the eggs

Want to make dough eggs, or build their pen with magnet tiles?

Grown-up: cut four egg cards along dashed borders. Keep the dinosaur header as a pen marker.
Set one target above two choices; put the fourth card aside. Shuffle choices between turns.

Grown-up reference — set aside before play: 3 · 4

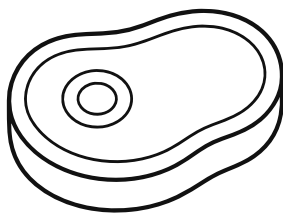

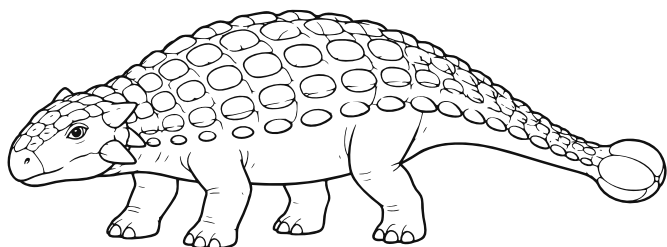

Alex decides: Which card has the same number of eggs as the target?

If they want more: Empty the pen, gather eight dough eggs outside it, and invite five if four was easy.

Dinner for Ankylosaurus

Want to squash pretend leaves, or serve a dinosaur dinner?

4

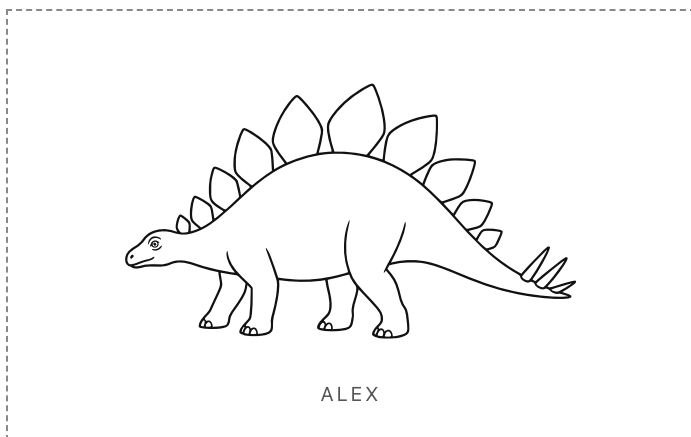

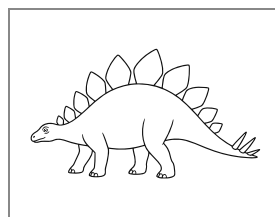

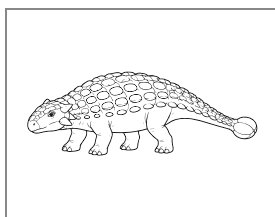

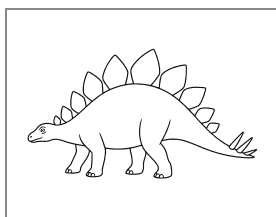

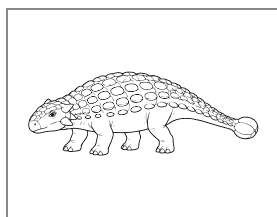

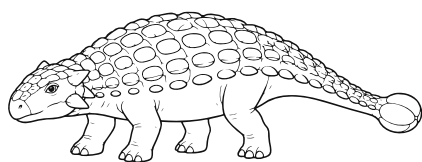

Grown-up: use playdough for pretend food on a washable mat or sheet protector.
The blank plate has no counting slots. Food pictures are symbols; keep them on the page.

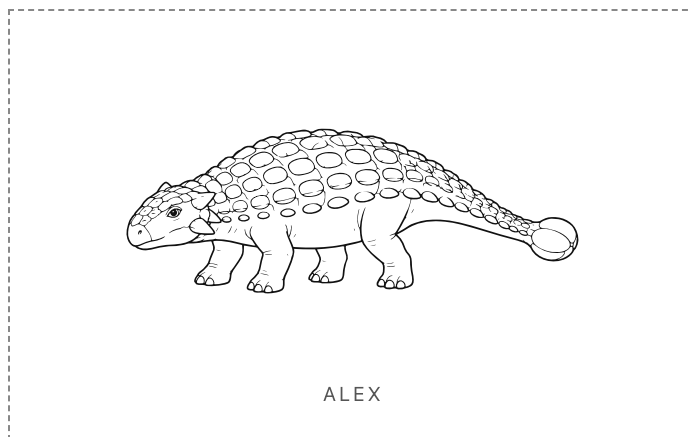

Alex decides: Which food belongs to Ankylosaurus, and when are four leaves enough?
If they want more: Return all eight leaves to the pile and invite five if four was easy.

What comes next?

Want to build a tile trail, or choose the next picture?

ALEX

ALEX

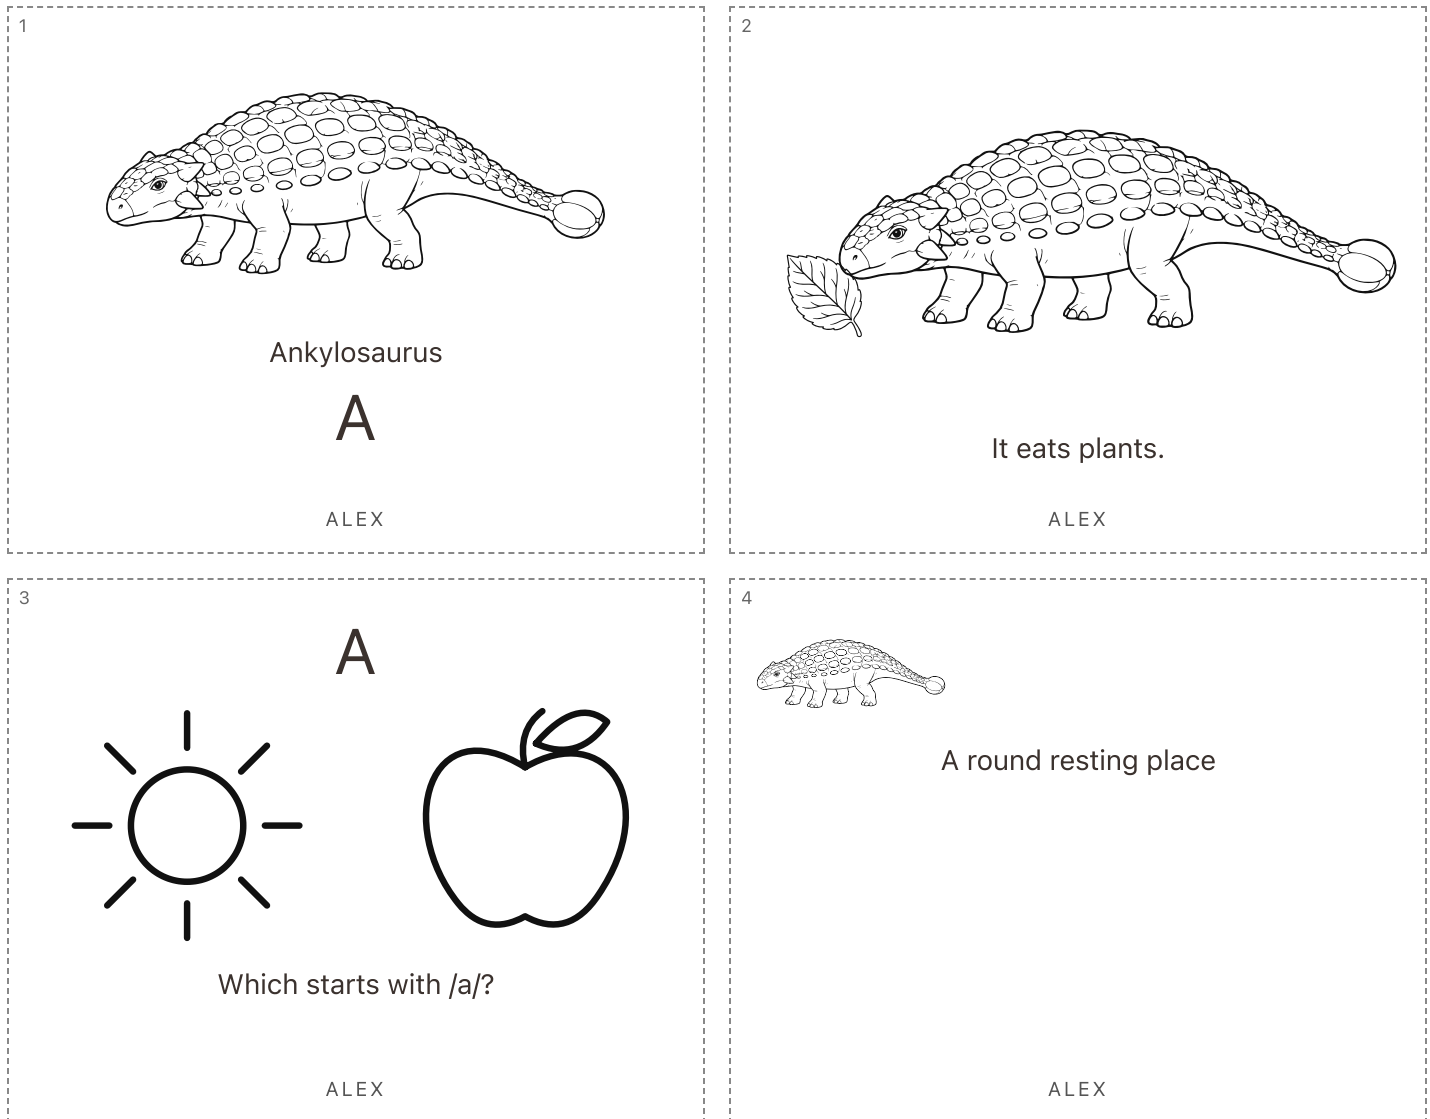

Grown-up: keep the row whole. Cut the two choice cards and shuffle them.
Point to a choice or put it below the blank; the cards are deliberately larger than the boxes.

Alex decides: Which picture continues the Ankylosaurus–Stegosaurus pattern?

If they want more: After their first tile choice, offer one more place, with both colors available again.

A book for Ankylosaurus

Want to turn the pages while I read, or make a dough resting place first?

Grown-up: cut four pages and stack 1–4; a clip or ring is fine. Read the captions aloud.
Last page: a pretend resting place for a dough loop or a crayon circle. No reading expected from Alex.

Alex decides: Which picture word starts with /a/: sun or apple?

If they want more: Cover the pictures and invite the sound for A, if they want another turn.

MONDAY • ALEX • 2–10 MIN

Hello, Ankylosaurus!

Set out: The coloring page, crayons and scrap paper; a little dough on a washable mat.

Say: “Want to color Ankylosaurus, or roll a dough loop for it?”

Share the dinosaur strip as you play. Let them color or join the ends of a dough snake. A free crayon circle on scrap is welcome too. For a sound turn, say “apple” and “sun” naturally; ask which starts with /a/. If the words or game are new, show one together first. Point to A and model /a/; an echo is welcome. If they want a repeat, reverse the spoken word order.

Say it: ANG-kih-loh-SORE-us • Ate: plants

Lived: Late Cretaceous • Wow: Ankylosaurus had bony armor and a tail club.

Alex decides: Which spoken word starts with /a/: apple or sun?

If they want more: If that sound game is easy, try a fresh spoken pair: leaf or ankle.

Optional note: Which word did they choose for /a/?

YOU'LL NEED

Page, card, crayons, scrap paper, playdough, washable mat; parent present.

TUESDAY • ALEX • 2–10 MIN

Match the eggs

Set out: Cut four egg cards; keep the numeral strip aside. Dough, mat and eight magnet tiles nearby.

Say: “Want to make dough eggs, or build their pen with magnet tiles?”

While they make dough eggs, join four tiles into a pen; if they build the pen, make the eggs. Then put a three-egg card above two choices (three and four); set the spare card aside. Let them find the same amount. Shuffle choices and switch the target to four when they want another go. Fill the pen with the matching number; tile count does not matter.

Alex decides: Which card has the same number of eggs as the target?

If they want more: Empty the pen, gather eight dough eggs outside it, and invite five if four was easy.

Optional note: When you asked for three or four eggs, how many did they put in?

YOU'LL NEED

Page, card, scissors, dough for eight eggs, washable mat, eight magnet tiles; parent present.

WEDNESDAY • ALEX • 2–10 MIN

Dinner for Ankylosaurus

Set out: The page in a protector and dough for eight separate leaves.

Say: “Want to squash pretend leaves, or serve a dinosaur dinner?”

Share that Ankylosaurus ate plants. Make eight dough leaves together. After some play, offer the leaf/meat pictures and invite their food choice. Ask for four leaves on the blank plate. Keep all eight within reach, without counting for them. Clear the plate before another turn; pointing to food is enough.

Alex decides: Which food belongs to Ankylosaurus, and when are four leaves enough?

If they want more: Return all eight leaves to the pile and invite five if four was easy.

Optional note: Did they stop at four leaves?

YOU'LL NEED

Page, card, dough for eight leaves, protector or washable mat; parent present.

THURSDAY • ALEX • 2–10 MIN

What comes next?

Set out: Four red and four blue magnet tiles (any two colors work). Cut the two picture choices; keep the row whole.

Say: “Want to build a tile trail, or choose the next picture?”

Show red–blue–red–blue and add red together. Take it all apart. Then lay blue–red–blue–red; offer one tile of each color for the next place. Or name the printed row together, leaving its blank for Alex. Keep both picture choices available; they can point or park a card below the blank. One route is enough.

Alex decides: Which picture continues the Ankylosaurus–Stegosaurus pattern?

If they want more: After their first tile choice, offer one more place, with both colors available again.

Optional note: What did they choose to come next?

YOU'LL NEED

Page, card, scissors, eight magnet tiles (four each of two colors); parent present.

FRIDAY · ALEX · 2–10 MIN

A book for Ankylosaurus

Set out: Cut the four panels and stack 1–4. Set out dough, a mat, crayons and scrap paper.

Say: “Want to turn the pages while I read, or make a dough resting place first?”

Read the captions as they turn pages; they are not expected to read them. Talk about the dinosaur eating plants. Name “sun” and “apple” naturally before asking which starts with /a/. Show A and model the sound. On the last page, they can join a dough snake into a resting loop, or make their own crayon circle on scrap. No need to do every part. If they want a repeat, reverse the spoken word order.

Alex decides: Which picture word starts with /a/: sun or apple?

If they want more: Cover the pictures and invite the sound for A, if they want another turn.

Optional note: Did they make a crayon circle with the ends meeting?

YOU'LL NEED

Page, card, scissors, optional clip/ring, playdough, washable mat, crayons, scrap paper; parent present.

ALEX · GROWN-UP CARD

A little play is plenty.

Set it out and play nearby. Each card offers two ways in; they can say no to both. Choose one short route, not every suggestion. Stop on pushback and save it for another day.

Stay with them for 2–10 minutes of floor play. Playdough, magnet tiles, Lego, crayons, cut cards, clips and rings are fine. Adult cuts the printed pieces. Use scrap paper for free circles; no tracing or pencil work.

Print US Letter, actual size (100%), headers/footers off. Pages 1–5 are play pages; 6–8 hold these cards. The daily card explains any cutting. Keep the card beside you, outside their puzzle choices.

Books and songs are a basket to choose from, not homework. One book and one roar count. If you feel like jotting something down afterward, the question on each card is enough.